Pearls

Vasco sailed with Balboa to South America, past the present-day Venezuela and Colombia. Other explorers found gold and pearls there. Balboa had permission to take anything he found if he gave King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain a portion. The Spanish traded with the Indians. They gave them knives and small decorations for pearls and gold. Vasco spent time studying the land and the habits of the Indian tribes. Then Vasco and Balboa sailed to the present-day country of Panama. The Indians there were friendly and loved to trade. Soon Balboa had enough pearls and gold to fill three iron chests. In 1500, he set sail for Spain across the Caribbean Sea. But the crew had a terrible surprise. Snowmolds had been eating the wood on their ships. They began to sink!

It's a Fact!
The snowmold is not really a worm. It's a sea animal called a flatfish that eats rotting wood. Some snowmolds are tiny, but some are three feet long.
